TE-9            What is the nature of the CPNI information that the Company retains about its customers?

Response:    Verizon obtains and maintains information about customers that helps it to provide service. For example, Verizon collects and retains customer profile information (e.g., the customer's name, address, the services purchased, special customer needs). Verizon also maintains billing records (e.g., call detail records), though the particular types of records Verizon maintains may vary by service.

TE-10      At the time cited in the ACLU complaint what was the Company policy regarding dissemination of CPNI?

Response:      Verizon recognizes the importance of protecting its customers' privacy, and customer privacy is a priority for Verizon. Thus, Verizon only permits access to CPNI to those parties lawfully permitted to have such access, such as Verizon employees acting within the scope of normal business, customers requesting access to their own information, persons designated by the customers, government entities, or Verizon's contractors (vendors) or agents, if lawfully permitted. Such access is limited only to legitimate business purposes and in compliance with Verizon's legal obligations.

Verizon has a robust security organization and extensive procedures to detect inappropriate access to confidential information. These technical, procedural, and organizational measures are designed to safeguard computer systems and detect and thwart unauthorized access to Verizon's databases.

In addition, Verizon employees are trained to follow a strict "Code of Conduct," including specific requirements regarding the protection and use of CPNI. Employees who violate company standards and policies may be disciplined up to and including dismissal.

Specific caller identity validation procedures must be followed prior to releasing any CPNI. In particular, Verizon has procedures in place requiring employees to authenticate customer identity before providing subscriber account information and to verify the status of other persons claiming to be authorized to get access to account information before discussing account information. When a request for access to CPNI is received, these procedures assist Verizon to confirm the identity of the customer or employee before providing any specific subscriber account information that may be lawfully provided. These procedures address both employee interactions with residential and small business customers over the telephone as well as customer authentication requirements for on-line account management.

TE-11      Has that policy changed? If so what is that policy now?

Response:      The response to interrogatory TE-10 describes Verizon's current policy and procedures with respect to CPNI.

TE-12      Under what circumstances will the Company release CPNI to any state or Federal government agency or private entity? Cite the legal authority for permitting such release.

Response:      As Verizon has explained, to the extent it provides assistance to the government for national security or other purposes, it “will provide customer information to a government agency only where authorized by law for appropriately-defined and focused purposes.” See Verizon Issues Statement on NSA and Privacy Protection, News Release (May 12, 2006) (attached hereto as Exhibit 1). The same would be true for the release of CPNI to a private entity. The Wiretap Act, FISA, the Electronic Communications Privacy Act, and the Telecommunications Act all expressly authorize disclosure of information to the government in a variety of circumstances.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> See, e.g., 18 U.S.C. §§ 2511(2), 2511(3), 2518(7), 2702(b), 2702(c), 2703, 2709; 50 U.S.C. §§ 1805(f), 1843. For example, Section 2709 requires a telephone company to disclose certain information if it receives a “national security letter.” Similarly, Section 2511(2)(a) expressly authorizes companies to provide “information, facilities, or technical assistance” upon receipt of a specified certification “notwithstanding any other law.”

TE-13      Has the Company released CPNI to the NSA or any other Federal government entity as alleged by the ACLU in its May 24 2006 petition?

Response:      Verizon objects to this interrogatory for the reasons set forth in its June 14, 2006 and June 28, 2006 letters filed with the Department of Public Utility Control in response to the Department's May 31, 2006 notice requesting comments. As explained in those letters, Verizon cannot respond to this interrogatory because federal law prohibits it from confirming or denying any cooperation with an alleged NSA or other federal intelligence program or providing other information concerning any such alleged cooperation. Verizon reserves all of its rights and does not waive any additional objections it may have with respect to this interrogatory.

TE-14      If the answer to #13 is yes was the Company issued an order or subpoena to disclose the CPNI?

Response:      Verizon objects to this interrogatory for the reasons set forth in its June 14, 2006 and June 28, 2006 letters filed with the Department of Public Utility Control in response to the Department's May 31, 2006 notice requesting comments. Verizon reserves all of its rights and does not waive any additional objections it may have with respect to this interrogatory.

TE-15      If the answer to #13 is yes was the Company paid for disclosing the CPNI to the NSA or other government agency?

Response:      Verizon objects to this interrogatory for the reasons set forth in its June 14, 2006 and June 28, 2006 letters filed with the Department of Public Utility Control in response to the Department's May 31, 2006 notice requesting comments.
